National CNA Association Releases CNA Education on COVID-19

CARL JUNCTION, MO – COVID-19 has dramatically impacted American life, but senior care has been hit the hardest. The National Association of Health Care Assistants (NAHCA) has heard from many members requesting guidance and education. NAHCA has created and released the first in a series of courses aimed specifically at providing CNAs education on COVID-19. This content is aimed at helping those who work in senior care to protect themselves and those they serve. NAHCA’s goal is to support CNAs and all healthcare professionals to provide compassionate and quality care in these difficult times.

“Communication and education are key as CNAs and ALCs battle this invisible enemy in the trenches,” said Lisa Sweet, NAHCA Co-Founder and Chief Clinical Officer. “We at NAHCA are striving to address both. This is the first in a multipart educational series on COVID-19.”

The courses are located on NAHCA’s website, <https://www.nahcacna.org/covid-19-education/>. They are provided free of charge and can be accessed by anyone.
